Jerry Steele Retires from Ridewell

Springfield, MO – Jerry Steele has retired from Ridewell Suspensions. Steele spent 14 years with the suspension manufacturer where he served as vice president of sales and as key representation for trade shows and a customer service liaison.

“Jerry will be missed at Ridewell,” said Ridewell President John Raidel II. “He is a strong salesman and was a tremendous asset to our company.”

Steele began his career selling used class 8 trucks in Charlotte, NC. He had been in the transportation industry for more than 40 years, including 17 years with Trailmobile and ten years with Tri-State Motor Transit.

Ridewell manufactures suspensions for the truck, trailer, bus and RV industries and supplies the North American community as well as many countries worldwide.
